

Summary of Learning - Major

Courses most relevant to my professional development - Instructional Strategies and Facilitation Skills (LEAD 316) and Coaching and Talent Development (LEAD 412). The major outcomes from these courses within my major were directly relevant to my professional life - what was learned today was applied tomorrow. Skills learned Summer 2024 in training design and presenting, were applied August 2024 in presenting to Human Resource personnel and October 2024 presenting at a leadership conference within my organization to 150 attendees. By implementing adult learning theory concepts, following design frameworks, considering constraints, and delivering with purpose, I can be a change agent of people within the community and organization.

Summary of Learning - General Education Class

In Fall 2023, Business Writing (ENGL 306) at the University of Louisville profoundly influenced my adult learning journey. Key takeaways - the nonlinear nature of the writing process and the rhetorical situation leading to considerations of audience, speaker (writer), purpose, constraints, and context to accurately and professionally persuade or inform the reader. Other key takeaways - reflection is the writing and seeking feedback is a critical step to writing development - learning not from the experience alone but more importantly, on reflection of the experience. The key takeaways along with feedback received from classmates and the professor, allowed for professional growth and development beyond this course.

Summary of Overall Learning - BS Organizational Leadership and Learning Degree

Key influences and learning in the Organizational Leadership and Learning Bachelor of Science degree program - make connections to expand learning experiences that link to real life applications and practice. Be a facilitator who designs and delivers training to effectively convey objectives that align with learners' needs, to encourage participation and motivation to practice new skills. Be purposeful and deliberate in settings personal and professional goals and encourage the same in others. Recognize that diversity brings unique perspectives and a key contribution to collaboration and success in teams and organizations. Develop a growth mindset in oneself and others. Seek opportunities to teach strategies for success and performance skills that lead and drive team performance. The fieldwork experience provided practical application of these key influences, and combined with critical thinking and problem-solving, demonstrated that one can influence change within the community and organization.
